

1941
I am sure we are very happy on this auspicious occasion to have with us our beloved Superintendent Dr. MacCorison. — It is always a pleasure for us to see him and especially upon such an occasion as this — I am sure we want him to realize the high place he has in our regard and we want to extend to him, each and every one our earnest and heartfelt wishes for his personal welfare.

I now as head teacher have the honor to announce that Dr. MacCorison will present to the graduates their diplomas.

Permit me also to add that in my judgment each scholar in this group is worthy of this recognition. My relationship with them for the past year or years has been very pleasant, and their faithful work has caused me rejoicing.

Several weeks ago, I went into Dr. MacCorison's office to talk with him about a speaker for graduation. When I mentioned graduation he said, "Why do you not invite your brother to speak?" I replied, "That certainly would please me."

For several years, I held the fortunate position of kid sister. When I was born a girl instead of a boy, my brother was disgusted at the thought of a mere girl and determined to make a boy out of me anyway. He taught me to swim, to paddle a canoe to shoot with the pistol and rifle and many other things that have since proved useful. That may explain why I do though by enjoy working with a group of boys and girls in the extra-curricular room. All through these many years we have been chums. It gives me great pleasure to introduce as the speaker of this occasion, my brother, Dr. Eugene S. Plutbok of Randolph, Mass.